Common European Framework (CEF)

Common European Framework is a process, a guise and a method for studying, learning, communicating, teaching and talking any foreign language. CEF helps to develop and enrich language system and search the language from various spheres; psychological and pedagogical. CEF determines not only language but also a culture of foreign language. It defines learners' proficiency and knowledge. CEF forms people's objectives in using and learning foreign language.

CEF gives a way to learn and teach any foreign language, this idea is supported by government because the government provides the materials, methods and programmes for expanding a foreign language. Namely, the Council of Europe defines the objectives, forms and instruments for learning language. Because of it is appeared a new notion as PLURILINGUIALISM. It must not be confused with the notion of multilingualism. Multilingualism is the ability to use several foreign languages for interaction in the mind of the user, showing or developing linguistic and cultural experience of the user which add to his/her communicative competence. Plurilingualism is an attempt to use one's linguistic knowledge and skills to communicate with others in many different situations. Though this processes the idea of language enrichment and development language obtains the goal to modify.

CEF influence, mostly, on education system, where the process of learning language is intensive for different levels and ages. Involving lots people in this programme (CEF) gives deep and fundamental knowledge of understanding the importance of learning and teaching any foreign language. CEF promotes and facilitates the educational methods for various countries in learning language.

Undoubtedly, the cultural aspect is not remained unaddressed. CEF forms a linguistic and cultural competence in process of learning. It plans the programmes for different levels and educational institutions; objectives and controlling system (exams, credits, certifications); self-control tasks for learners.

The main feature of CEF is its flexibility and transparency and user-friendliness.
